GarfNet is penguin-powered and full of unixy goodness! Yep! we're "open source" and enjoying every moment of it. GNU/Linux is serving us so well that there is hardly a whiff of the mighty Micro$oft on this site these days. Just penguins and of course, a

If you haven't been here for a while, then there are some shiny new things to look at. Firstly there is our new and improved internet radio tuner, linking you to some of the best British, European & World radio stations <http://www.garfnet.org.uk/tuner> . Secondly there is a new section charting earthquakes

<http://www.garfnet.org.uk/earthquake>

. There are loads of other tweaks & fixes too. So make yourself a cup of tea, or pour a nice cold beer and have a good look round.

Open source is fantastic! It means we can develop and deploy all manner of goodies that would cost a fortune if we tried to do it using proprietary software. These are some interesting places to visit here at Garfnet...

GarfNet Pictures+Media - based on the legendary Coppermine image database system. There's loads of new stuff over there.

- And that lazy old Goose now has his very own Blog, running on the excellent Wordpress blog manager. Just don't take anything he says too seriously! He is a goose after all!
- And there are some cool toys in the tools section, if you like that sort of thing!

This part of GarfNet is powered by an amazing CMS (Content Management System) called Joomla

. Derived from the old

Mambo

CMS - and written by the same group of developers - apparently

Joomla

means "

together

" in Swahili. Please find that some links in the new site still take you back to the old site. This is intentional while we transfer the content. The GarfNet "Home" link will always take you back here. Meantime, you can visit our sister site DEOSS. DEOSS now hosts the old GarfNet Moodle distance learning environment as well as dozens of other open source-based projects.
